

■ Workshop with Grant Wiggins on Feedback

In this hands-on workshop led by Grant Wiggins, participants will learn what the best feedback looks and sounds like, how to provide it, and how to make room for it in the curriculum to achieve significantly improved results. Some of the questions we will consider together:

- What is excellent feedback and how does it differ from praise and blame or advice?
- Why must feedback precede advice (and not be confused with advice) if learning is to improve?
- How do you design and use formative assessments for maximum impact and minimum effort?
- How do you make room for feedback and its use in your curriculum and instruction?

Grant Wiggins is an internationally recognized authority on curriculum, assessment, and school reform. As president of Authentic Education, Grant consults worldwide; he also develops print and web-based resources based on his award-winning work, Understanding by Design. Grant's work grows from 14 years of experience in teaching and coaching as well as his involvement in many of the most influential reform initiatives in the country.
